The company is particularly interested in hiring workers who were displaced from industries that were hit the hardest by the pandemic.

“As an essential business working throughout the pandemic, we saw first-hand that every member of our team is just that — essential,” says Jenn Hulett, Chief Human Resources Officer at Core-Mark. “We look forward to growing our team across all lines of business. Applicants looking to advance their careers or re-enter the workforce will have immediate and meaningful career opportunities.”

Core-Mark is hiring for upwards of 1,000 permanent positions across all lines of business, including Class A and CDL commercial drivers, driver helpers and multiple warehouse positions. All full-time positions come with comprehensive benefits (including healthcare, 401k, life insurance and more), and many come with signing bonuses and incentive pay.

One recently hired Core-Mark employee is Santos Panzo, who left the field of engineering in his home country of Angola to find his future as a Core-Mark warehouse associate in its New England North division. “Everyone needs an opportunity in life and Core-Mark gave me that,” Panzo said. “The hiring process was simple and the communication was extremely efficient.”

Core-Mark operates distribution centers and divisions in 32 locations nationwide, and all divisions are hiring. Some of the cities with the highest number of available positions are Atlanta, Georgia; Salt Lake City, Utah; Portland, Oregon; Spokane, Washington; and Toronto, Ontario, Canada. The company hopes to have all positions filled by May 31, 2021.
